FADE IN:

EXT. KWANG'S KWIKI-MART/PORCH - DAY

CALIJAH, African American, 70, sits on a bench on the porch of the store. He mops the sweat from his forehead with a faded red bandana. Beside him is Eustis, 72. He bears a farmer's tan. The heat doesn't seem to be bothering him as much.

    COLIJAH
    This has got to be the hottest day so far.

    EUSTIS
    Yep.

    COLIJAH
    The summers seem to be getting worse every year. Have you noticed that?

    EUSTIS
    Sign of the times I reckon.

Several GROANS and GRUNTS sound from O.S.

The two men turn their heads to see...

EXT. MAIN STREET - DAY

Dozens of MEN, WOMEN, and CHILDREN, faces covered with gore staggering up Main Street.

EXT. KWANG'S KWIKI-MART/PORCH - DAY

Colijah wipes his forehead again with the bandana. Eustis SIGHS. The two elderly gentleman show no signs of fear.

    COLIJAH
    Zombies. Didn't we take care of all of them?

    EUSTIS
    Apparently not.

    COLIJAH
    (calling out)
    Kwang!

A few seconds later, KWANG HO, Korean, 65, owner of the Kwiki-Mart, exits out onto the porch.

    KWANG
    (voice heavily accented)
    What can I get you guys?

Eustis points in the direction of the approaching zombies. Kwang sees them and nearly collapses.
EUSTIS

Our shotguns.

He darts back into his store, all the while SWEARING IN KOREAN.

EXT. MAIN STREET - DAY

The zombies have now fixed their glazed eyes on Colijah and Eustis. Their MOANING and GROANING intensifies with the anticipation of obtaining fresh meat.

EXT. KWANG'S KWIKI-MART/PORCH - DAY

Kwang appears with two pump shotguns, and two fully loaded bandoliers hanging over his shoulders. The two elderly men stand and take the guns and bandoliers from the store owner. They drape the bandoliers over their own shoulders and pump their weapons, the CHA-CHUNK of the shells being chambered a welcome melody to his ears.

SOO JIN, his daughter, 33, and HY, his granddaughter, 10, come out onto the porch. Soo Jin's eyes go wide as saucers. She reaches down and takes Hy by the shoulders. Hy, mouth agape, goes as rigid as a board.

EUSTIS

Y'all better get in your safe room.

Kwang ushers his family inside, quickly closes the door and locks it.

EUSTIS (CONT'D)

You ready old timer?

COLIJAH

Let's make us some hamburger.

The two elderly friends descend the porch steps and...

FADE TO BLACK:

OVER BLACK

SUPER TITLE: COLIJAH AND EUSTIS VS THE REDNECK ZOMBIES

THE END