EXT. SKYSCRAPER ROOFTOP - MORNING

Chaos is going on below. People are rioting, shooting, buildings are burning down and exploding, cars are crashing... pure anarchy.

Standing by the ledge watching wearing all-black and hoodie with black leather gloves and a mask is DELUSION.

The mask is made with the Bible cover with a large question mark in the center.

DELUSION (V.O.)

It's beautiful. The symphony of chaos is delightful playing in my ears. This is what they were avoiding, and now there's no other choice but to eat the truth the internet has disguised for so long. The end of mankind caused by mankind, seeing the truth crumble before their eyes. Humanity was taught what the Bible says is true, yet, the way society aligned it's soul with the internet, the internet made humanity believe the Bible is false. Look at how everything the Bible stands for as wrong is glorified as right.

(Scoffs)

Then again...who's to say the Bible is true, considering it's been written over a dozen times in so many different forms? So what do people rely on? The words from other humans they believe are speaking the truth, not knowing if that person abides by their own words, which are basically recycled words from other people with their own twist. They judge each other's looks, and they all look the same. They claim one race is superior to others, yet they bring the most harm to their own race. They judge each other's sexuality, and nine times out of ten they indulged in the same acts, or one of their loved ones is like one of the people they're judging, but they won't speak bad about their loved ones. They claim they're better than the next person because of their money, but before they obtained their wealth, they were no better than the next person.

DELUSION (CONT'D)

All of these things and more because if you create the perfect image on the Internet, people will believe in you and start to follow your words.

(Soft laugh)

"Image." A. Word you can relate with God, for the simple fact that's the only image you should follow, but humans follow other humans, and that's what began the chaos. Now the apocalypse has arrived because other humans put an end to the Internet, and now they're forced to embrace who they are, having no clue about who they really are. Now, they're seeking God, pleading for him to save them. Now they're focused on the well being of their lives and family, but it's too late. God has crashed and it can never be restored. Humanity is wondering if the God that crashed was the absolute truth and salvation? Or if the words ignored and defiled in the Bible were truth and salvation? When the glory of darkness that will never be removed from their eyes takes over, maybe the truth will be discovered. Since humans follow humans, they should caress the agonizing pleasure of death they brought upon themselves. And in the end...

The mask is removed, and now we see a cyborg with red eyes.

DELUSION (V.O.) (CONT'D)

What they created for an easier way to live shall remain, and the humans who survive shall forever remain our slaves, stuck in a coma believing everything technology has to say.

The chaos continues as Delusion releases a sinister laugh, and the screen slowly fades to black.
