PATIL
Miss Nalini, before leaving, I can expect a meeting with you.

NALINI
Yes. Yes. how I can without seeing the children?

Patil leaves. Nalini closes the door and comes back in sofa, picks up the glass and empties it in one sip, sees towards Rajan for new peg. Rajan is still having glass in his hand. While encountering sight with Nalini, he empties the glass. He looks at Nalini and then at the glass on the table. Nalini pours whisky in the glasses. Rajan draws a cigarette case from the pocket, pulls a cigarette and forwards it to Nalini. Nalini takes the cigarette. Rajan pulls one for him and puts the cigarette case back in his pocket. Nalini lits both the cigarettes.

NALINI
(smiles)
Thanks.

Rajan does not react. Nalini’s face is drawn. Then

NALINI CONTD.
(in hoarse voice)
How much a man changes, when he becomes great.

RAJAN
(ironically)
Yes, I am seeing.

NALINI
But there is a lot of difference between seeing and knowing.

RAJAN
(sipping)
Yes I know. It happens.

Rajan lits one more cigarette.

NALINI
What do you know?

Nalini becomes emotional. her eyes become wet.

RAJAN
(hiding pain)
What I have suffered and now suffering.

NALINI
(heavy throat)
Is it enough and extent for a human being to get known about his own sorrows? And he admits that he has known all?

RAJAN
No. Not enough and not the extent. As nothing has extent. But what type of blame is this? I should blame you. It was my fault that I kept on knocking at your door in the darkness.

Rajan ends his peg in one draught. He becomes uncontrollable.

NALINI
This was not your fault Rajan, but mine, and I am suffering for that. I shall remain suffering. I have never forgiven me. Rajan, I am repenting on my own and if you feel I should repent on your behalf also, I am ready to do it also.

Nalini starts crying betterly. Rajan comes to nalini and to pacify her puts his hand on her back. But Nalini stays away.

NALINI CONTD.
Don’t touch me Rajan. I am not worthy enough to be touched by you.

Rajan pulls his hand back. He stays away for a while then makes two pegs and gives one to Nalini.

RAJAN
(in a pacifying tone)
Take two sips, you will recover. But Neelu, could you not share your sorrows and agonies with me.

Nalini takes two sips.

NALINI
(a bit recovered)
Can all the sorrows be shared? Some my be personal. I didn’t want that I may be deserving your sympathy or abhorrence. I am satisfied that you used to remember me, may be thinking me unfaithfull.

Nalini takes two more sips from the glass and puts the glass on the table, takes a cigarette and lits it.

RAJAN
Do you like children, Neelu?

NALINI
I not only like but love children

RAJAN
Then why don’t you get married? May not be with me, but with somebody else.

NALINI
(interrupting)
I could have married with anyone for children but for myself I could only marry you because...

Nalini stops.

RAJAN
(sympathetically)
Why? Why did you stop? What is in your mind? Speak out Neelu. If you can’t speak out to me, then to whom you will speak?

NALINI
You are right Rajan. It is better I speak out. I will not die having this load on my mind. The Neelu you loved, got spoilt Rajan, what more I can say.

RAJAN
Nalini you took me wrong. You have done unjust treatment to me. I liked and loved you as you were. I could adopt you in any of your conditions.

NALINI
Yes Rajan, I never took you wrongly. But for your love, your liking, my responsibility was also there.

Nalini puts her head in Rajan’s lap. Rajan fondle her cheeks and rotates his fingers in her hair.

NALINI CONTD.
(as if to herself)
I have paid to maintain this sanctity, paying and will remain paying for whole of my life.

RAJAN

Stop Neelu stop, for God’s sake, now. Don’t further...

Rajan puts his lips on hers. Nalini entrusts herself to Rajan and puts her arms around his waist.

ANITA
(meakly)
But it was not my fault alone.

Tea keeps on lying as it is.

NALINI
(weeping)
What? You would have been the first prey to Bindu, your groom. You never thought even once that what were you doing? You spent all your university life in Bindu’s lap warming her bed, nude. It was you and only you, who put me in Bindu’s trap.

Anita stands up and catches Nalini by her shoulders, entices her and puts her into her lap. Then rotates her fingers in her hair, kisses her on her forehead. Nalini calms down. Dried tears can be seen on her cheeks.

ANITA
(soothing Nalini)
Nalini, your anger is right and you are right in your place. I agree that I was behind all that. But we were the prey to circumstances. Now what happened, can never be recovered. Nalini, calm down. Have you ever thought that what happened to me when I fell into Bindu’s trap?

Nalini listens calmly, but raises her eyes to look at Anita’s face. She looks sad.
