Synopsis by

Tomas W. Beaumont

“WHAT’S DOWN THERE” is a supernatural thriller dealing a salvage operation at the bottom of Lake Superior. An enormous freighter which went down in a storm more than thirty years ago has just been discovered. But what will the salvage team find when they dive the mysterious wreckage of the SS GRIFFON?

Grant Yates, his wife Holly, and their assistant Geoff Bannon are used to doing dangerous underwater work in the warmth of the Gulf of Mexico. But when a suave shipping heir hires them to dive into the cold waters of the greatest lake to investigate the wreckage, they will be put to the ultimate test. Hidden in the bowels of the sunken freighter may be a fortune of gold bullion. Private ownership of the precious metal was illegal at the time of her sinking, and it is rumored that the heir’s relatives may have been using the ship to smuggle it. If Grant and his team are to recover it, they will have to come face to face with an evil they could not have possibly expected to encounter- the Griffon’s undead crew!

“WHAT’S DOWN THERE is a grand ghost story inspired by a tragic real-life event. In 1975, a freighter named SS EDMUND FITZGERALD also suffered a similar fate as the Griffon on a stormy November night. Driven into an impassible storm by a reckless captain and a shipping company willing to risk an entire crew, the Griffon never stood a chance. Man’s greed led to her sinking, and now it will lead to the violation of her crew’s final resting place. For anyone who dares to remove anything from this underwater tomb... there will be hell to pay!
